On the Prowl

"On the Prowl" may simply be a theme to a book, but if you look closely, it means so much. The title fits us perfectly! Most of us are not perfect. Actually, none of us is. Yet day in and day out we relentlessly pursue our goals, our hopes, our dreams. Each of us is on the prowl for glory, our own success. And as a whole, our perseverance and constant search for that success has made Jasper High School the four-star school that it is. This is evident through our constant trek to the top. Whether this be advancing to the state tennis finals or scoring well in academic competitions, we never cease to stop, always looking to better ourselves, our school, and our community.

AROUND TOWN WHAT'S GOIN' On?

Around 6 o'clock Friday night, cell phones rang as students tried to find something exciting to do. This, at times, was difficult as weekend activities became old and repetitive. However, we teens always found a place to go to occupy our free time away from school. Many students went on dates, which included dinner and a movie. Fellow classmates supported athletes on Friday nights, cheering them on to victory, both at home and away.

When Saturday night rolled around, teens once again looked for some sort of fun. Most students started the night by driving around, stopping occasionally to chat with friends. By the end of the night students were scattered at different parties around town. As the night dragged on, Taco Bell became the place to be for a late night snack.

Some JHS students spent their Sunday working on homework they had put off till the last moment. Others used this time for rest and relaxation in anticipation of another hectic school week.

TRENDS

WHAT'S YOUR

Fashion, or the desire to be fashionable, has existed since man has walked the earth. Even Shakespeare described what it was to be fashionable during his time, calling it, "the glass of fashion and the mold of form." Clothing trends are ever-changing; no longer is it hip to wear tights and tunics like during the Shakespearean period. Times have changed drastically.

The latest trends caught on at JHS, with fashion daredevils setting the tone. For girls, flared jeans, vintage wear, head scarves, and turquoise jewelry were all the rage. Funky hair pieces turned "bed head" into good hair days, and strappy belts added flair. Along with winter and frigid temperatures came a new sense of style. Scarves were worn indoors over sweaters as well as slung around shoulders outdoors with coats. Dirty, worn denim was the craze of many students. High-rise, backless sneakers gave female students a lift, while the students bearing XY chromosomes were more interested in the trends relating to athletics. The latest and most expensive trends for teen guys were entertainment units like the Play Station II, X Box, and Game Cube.

As time goes on, the tastes and trends of JHS will continue to morph and change. One can only imagine what new styles will cruise through the cat walks that are school hallways in the years to come.

JOBS

WHERE'S THE Money?

A question many students have asked in the course of their job is, "Would you like fries with that?" Chances are that about forty to fifty percent of our student body has flipped hamburgers or "dropped" fries at Hardee's or McDonald's. Some students filed papers at Kimball Home Furniture or a local doctor's office, checked out customers in the express lane at the newly renovated Buehler's Buy-Low, or worked as a paper carrier for The Herald.

The reason to have a job was simple. It was usually to earn money to pay for a dream car or possibly to save for a college education. However, some students worked just to earn a little money that could be used to pay for CDs, a movie with friends, or maybe a Spring Break trip to Cancun. Others were forced by their parents to seek employment.

No matter the reasons for employment, students with jobs learned more responsibility, better communication skills, and good experience that will help them perform well in future jobs.

CARS

WHAT DRIVES YOU?

It will always be true: students have places to go and things to do. Part-time jobs, club meetings, and sports practices prove that the school bus is no longer a sufficient mode of transportation. But in trying to keep up with the speed of life before and after school, students had to find a way to travel from point A to point B. The solution to the problem: cars.

Owning a car had the potential of making life easier or more difficult for the average student. Some were given a "hand-me-down" car that was passed on from a parent or an older sibling. Still others took on part-time jobs to be able to make loan and insurance payments on their vehicle.

Dusty paint jobs and mud-covered tires were not rare sights in the parking lots. During school hours cars became covered with construction dust as the add-ons caused a stir in the air. Rock and dirt drives have turned into puddles after rainy days.

Even though owning a car might have brought a problem or two with it, having independent transportation was a must.

SIBLINGS

ARE YOU SURE WE'RE

RELATED?

You're walking around Wal-mart with your little brother or sister, and you see someone from school. The next thing you know, everyone at school knows about your cute little "mini-me."

Now think about all the students who have "bigger clones," "a mini-me," or a twin walking around all the time at school! They are constantly told by teachers and students, "You look just like your older brother!" or "Your little sister is a pleasure to teach, and she is so smart!"

Even when brothers and sisters try to avoid each other, they end up having to talk to each other to relay messages from parental units telling them that they need to clean their room because a barn is cleaner than their bedroom. Luckily they are there to turn to when no one else cares about the worst day of your life.

They rub off on each other by liking the same clubs or sports and see each other on a daily basis. Many siblings in Jasper are involved in extra-curricular activities together, letting everyone know they are related.

Our faces were painted, and we donned black and gold as we screamed out cheers for our Cats on the prowl for victory. We packed the stands at all the tournament games, showing our Wildcat Pride by wearing crazy outfits and wigs, giving our support until the end.

The Student Council once again sponsored spirit days on Fridays, making JHS look like a war zone on camo day or straight out of "That 70's Show" while students participated in 70's and 80's day.

We kicked off the year by designing class vehicles for the annual pep parade and continued showing our spirit throughout the year with pep rallies filled with daring obstacle courses and hot dog-eating contests.

As another successful year for Jasper athletics unfolded, numerous teams advanced deep into the tournaments, and they were honored with student body send-offs as they went on their way to capture state titles. Whatever the case may have been, we were always there, backing our Cats!

YOUTH GROUPS

M WHAT'S YOUR MISSION?

The definition of "youth" is time between childhood and adulthood, and "group" is defined as a number of persons or things together. By Katie Spellmeyer's (9) definition, a youth group is a place where teens "learn more about our religion and have a closer relationship to God."

Whitney Hochgesang (9) said she attends Young Life and Shiloh U.M.C. youth groups "because we learn about God in a fun way."

Themes like Watermelon Fest and Western Night kept organizations like Young Life fun and exciting. Young Life clubs were held Monday nights at the Knights of Columbus Home. Some high school students who attended Young Life were leaders for a middle school youth group, WyldLife.

Shalane Enlow (11) attended Saint John Bosco Catholic Youth Group "to learn more about my religion and myself. Plus, I make lasting friends who will be there for everything." Whatever the definition, singing, praying, talking, and just having fun were on the agenda at many youth groups.

It is one of those timeless high school traditions: Homecoming. Two nights a year students and the community join to "ooh" and "aah" over JHS's finely dressed court members.

As the weather threatened to dampen Football Homecoming activities, the student body was busy placing the final touches on their homecoming displays. The Class of 2003 once again captured first place on the displays with the theme, "Pictures may say a 1,000 words, but the memories we make are priceless." The ominous clouds cleared away for glitz and glam as the red carpet was unrolled and Anina Tollett and Matt Dills were crowned Football Queen and King in Cinderella's Court. The Wildcats made Homecoming even more memorable with a 56-7 romp over Bosse.

Under the lights of basketball fever, court members were treated to a "Winter Wonderland" as Student Council members transformed the gym into beauty. Hannah Brescher and Josh Oates had the honor of Basketball Queen and King bestowed upon them. The Cats treated their royalty with another exciting win over Bosse.

The Welcome Freshmen dance always evokes loads of excitement and class spirit from students, starting the year off with a blast of positive energy. The Snowball Dance is a semi-formal in January, usually held at the local Country Club.

Every year, a Snowball King and Queen as well as a Prince and Princess are crowned. Michael Segal and Jennifer Lueken took the honor of King and Queen. Ryan Wanninger and Tonya Schepers were named Prince and Princess. Occasionally, other extras are offered to students. Convocations that proved to be favorites of students included Jeff Korb, a motivational speaker, Robert Bluestone, a guitarist, Rick Bender, a tobacco prevention speaker, and Kevin Wanzer, who delivered the A.L.O.HA message.

Transforming drab construction areas in the cafeteria and gym into a "Hollywood Magic" scene, the junior class presented a Prom to remember. The months of preparation by the junior class were well worth the effort as upperclassmen and their guests walked onto the red carpet with stars in their eyes.

Mirroring the Oscar glitz, evening gowns and tuxedos adorned guests as they danced the night away in the beautifully decorated ballroom with the likes of Austin Powers, Marilyn Monroe, and Clint Eastwood. The Hollywood Hill, movie reels, and rotating Oscar statues embellished the setting. Leading from the entrance into the sitting area was a walk of fame complete with the names of senior homeroom teachers.

King and Queen Josh Oates and Natalie Scherle were crowned to super stardom for the night, along with Prince and Princess Brandon Temple and Shelly Seifert. The crowned couples shared a dance to "Wonderful Tonight." It was a beautiful night for all.

Volleyball, card tournaments, games, karaoke, burping contests, and pie throwing all helped provide entertainment through the early morning hours until four o'clock.

As the night wound down, junior and senior students had the chance to win one of many valuable prizes. Megan Ruxer claimed the grand prize of $1,000, while others took home TV's, VCR's, sound systems, a Playstation II, and computers.

Graduation

Two thousand one hundred sixty days ago, our journey began. We excitedly grabbed our little backpacks and name tags before Mom snapped a quick, cheesy picture before our first day of first grade. Now, many teachers, friends, tests, lockers, and memories later, we've come to the conclusion of our education as one, the Class of 2003. Some of us are very sorry to see it all end, longing for "just one more" dance or football game. Others feel only slightly sad, ready for the next chapter of their lives. The remainder is downright ecstatic about finishing, almost to the point of running, diploma in hand, out the door as if being chased by a rabid animal. Those of us headed off to college, 207, exactly, have made our way to the doorstep of the "real world." Others will have to grow up quickly as 19 enter the work force and 9 students join the military. We experienced many firsts in our four years at JHS - first homecomings, pep parades, proms, chances to participate in varsity sports. These "firsts" will bond us together forever. We are now writing the history of a new era, and, as such, we have a clean slate, a blank book. (Some needed one more than others!) We have the ability today to create a new world. It sounds like a daunting task, and one with very real potential for failure. Scary. Fortunately, one of the most marvelous things about the human race is its infinite capacity to dream. Each one of us dreamed of finishing high school, and now that dream has been realized. Our dreams will change and evolve. Already, this class's aspirations are focused on the next phase of life. We dream now of striking out on our own, finding new friends, meeting that perfect person, starting a family, making the dean's list, landing that dream job, or redefining our characters. Dreams cause people to struggle, to reach, to innovate, to create, to change. Dreams keep the world moving forward. They spur our growth and build us into the people we are meant to be. The day people cease to dream is the day people cease to exist. As valedictorian Julie Bosler pointed out in her speech, Garth Brooks had it right when he wrote "A dream is like a river,

ever-changing
as it grows, and the dreamer's
just a vessel
that must follow
where it goes."

Class of # 2004

What does being a class officer mean to you?

“Being a class officer means I have earned the respect of my classmates, and they believe I can do things right.”

-Luke Mehringer
President

“Being a class officer isn't leading your class. It's knowing your class and how to work with them.”

-Michael Segal
Vice President

“Being a class officer means that I have the trust and respect of the Junior class and take responsibility of making decisions that represent us.”

-Sara Schulte
Secretary

“To me, being a class officer means being able to take on many responsibilities. You have to be a leader and make sure what needs to be done gets done.”

-Ashley Braun
Treasurer

Waiting anxiously for next year

Audra Meyer and Layn Witte try on their Coach Brewer hats during lunch. Many juniors dressed up for spirit days and supported school activities.

Blaken Wamsley helps paint the set for "Laugh-In." Many juniors were involved in after-school activities and sports.

Ryan Snyder puts away books in his "locker." Juniors with lockers in the 400 hall were the first to put their books in the library during tiling; that was just one obstacle juniors faced.

The Junior class deliberated for months to come up with a magical theme for the prom. Wanting it to be special and creative, juniors slept, breathed, and ate prom.

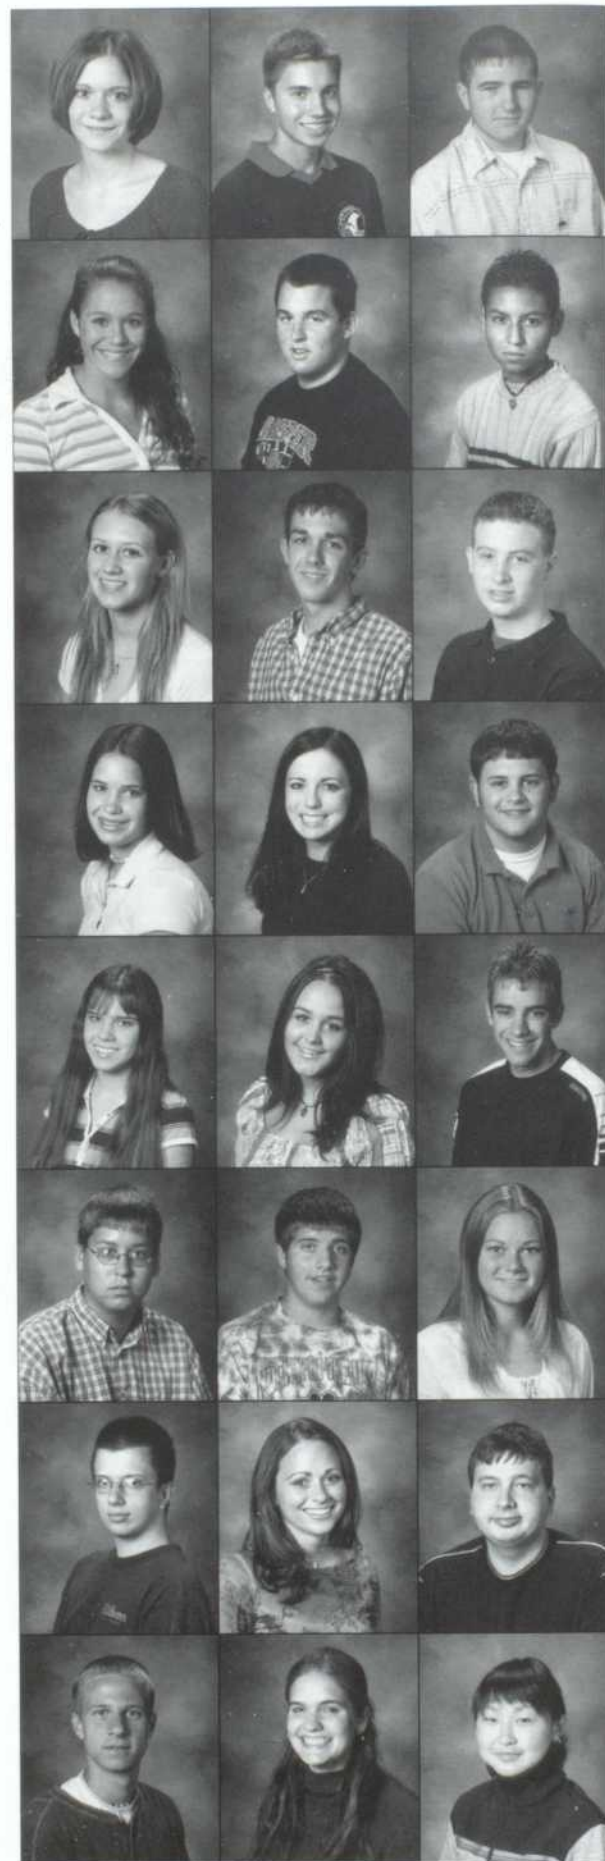

A theme like "Happily Ever After" was nothing compared to the original they decided upon. The theme they picked was "Hollywood," which brought out the glamour and delight of movie stars and the rich and famous.

Prom is the most important event a class participates in, and the Class of 2004 made the night of prom, May 10, unforgettable.

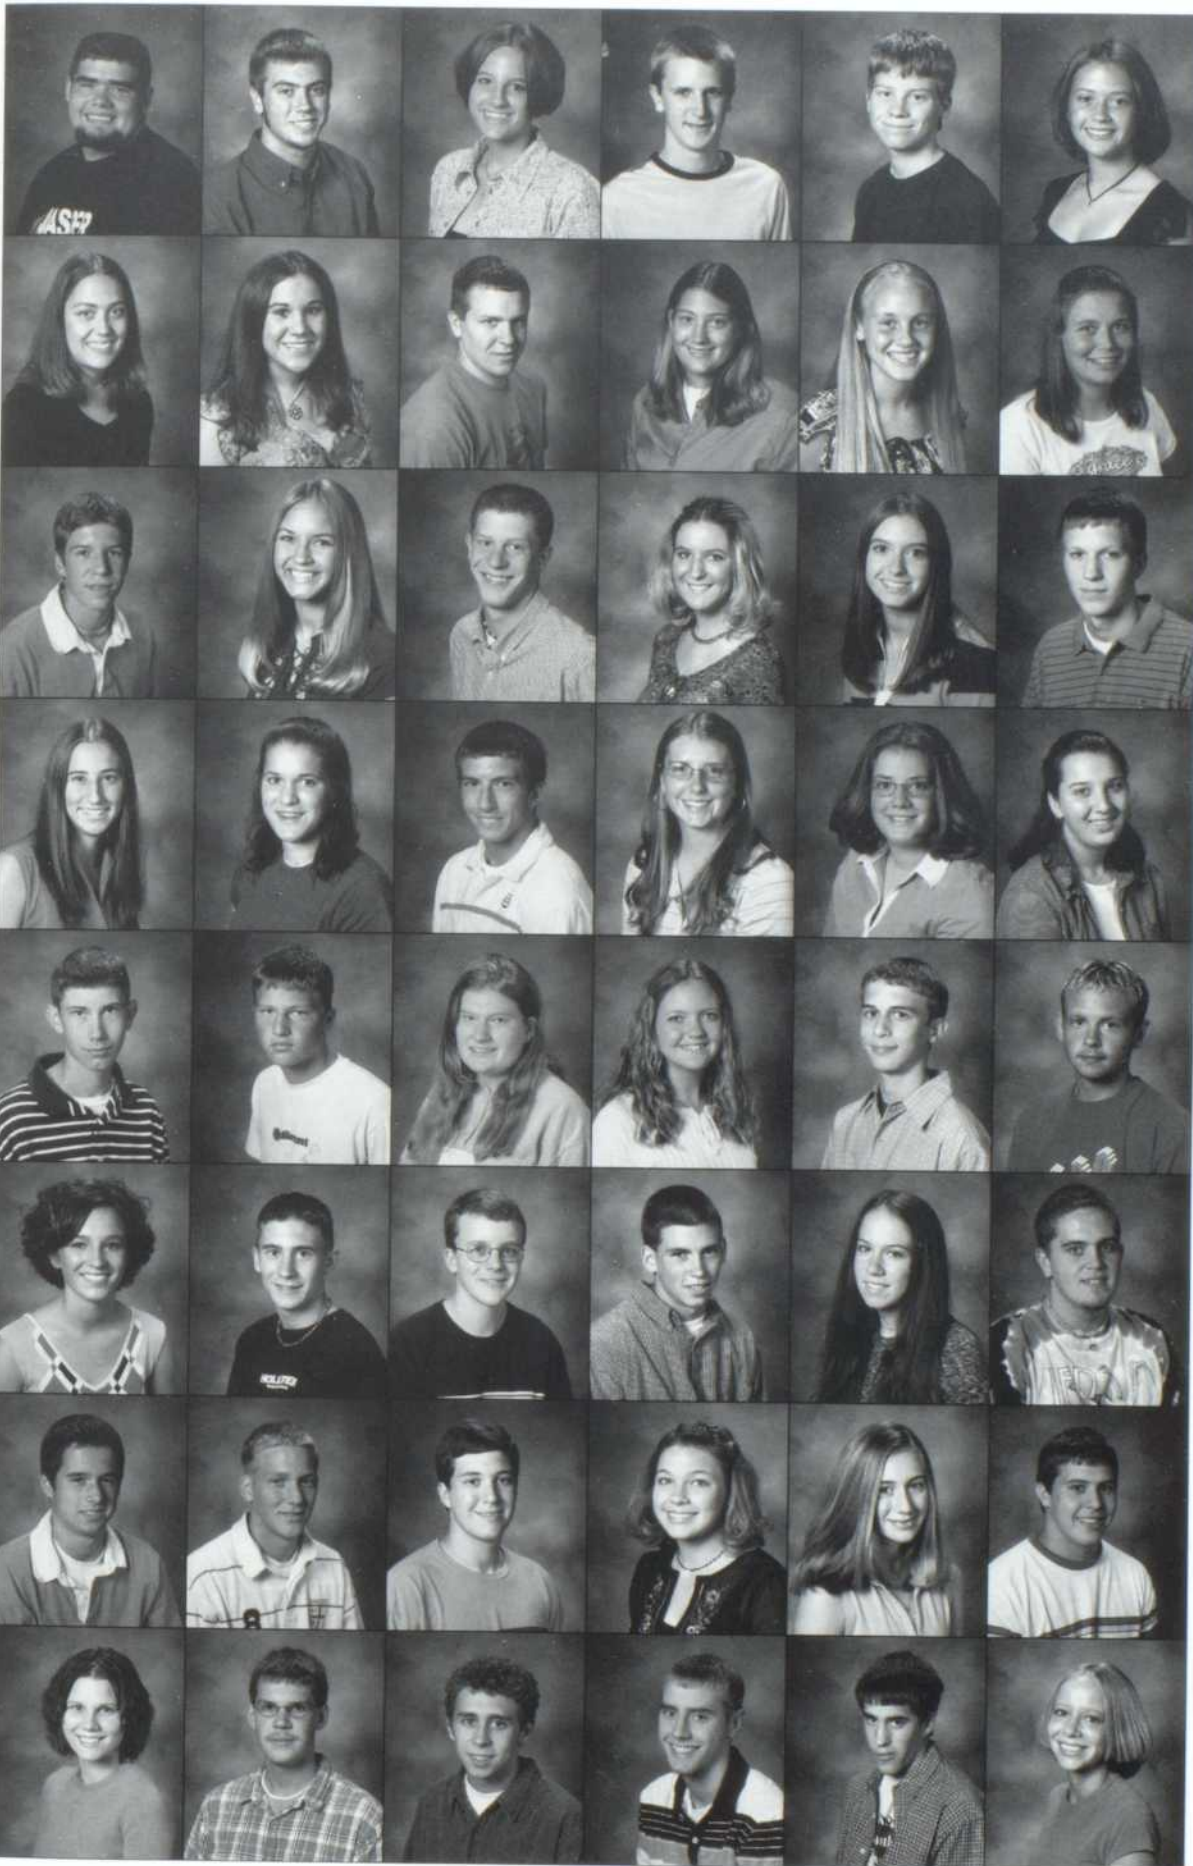

Teacher and coordinator of prom, Joe Shelton, said, "The juniors worked really hard this year to make this a great prom. I am proud of their efforts."

The leadership and participation of students is going to make their senior year wonderful.

Class of 2005

How has the Class of 2005 impacted JHS?

“Throughout the year we have been able to achieve our goals with determined and positive attitudes. Our class has shown great participation in pep sessions. We have also been positive role models for the freshman class.”

-Lindsey Taylor
President

“Our class does a good job of being active in clubs and athletics which contributes to the success of JHS.”

-Anna Krodel
Vice President

“We bring a lot of diversity to the school in sports, music, and various other activities. I feel as though our class adds a lot of character to Jasper High School.”

-Katie Nordhoff
Secretary

“The Class of 2005 has impacted JHS in a few ways. We have benefitted the athletic program with our great athletes. Our school spirit at the athletic events has helped to contribute to the overall school spirit. We have impacted JHS through all of our involvement helping to build JHS's clubs.”

Working as one for eleven years

Dressing a little bold for Halloween, Whitney Sendelweck, Katie Moeller, Ali Block, Calley Hoffman, Anna Krodel, and Tara Huther make the most of their sophomore year.

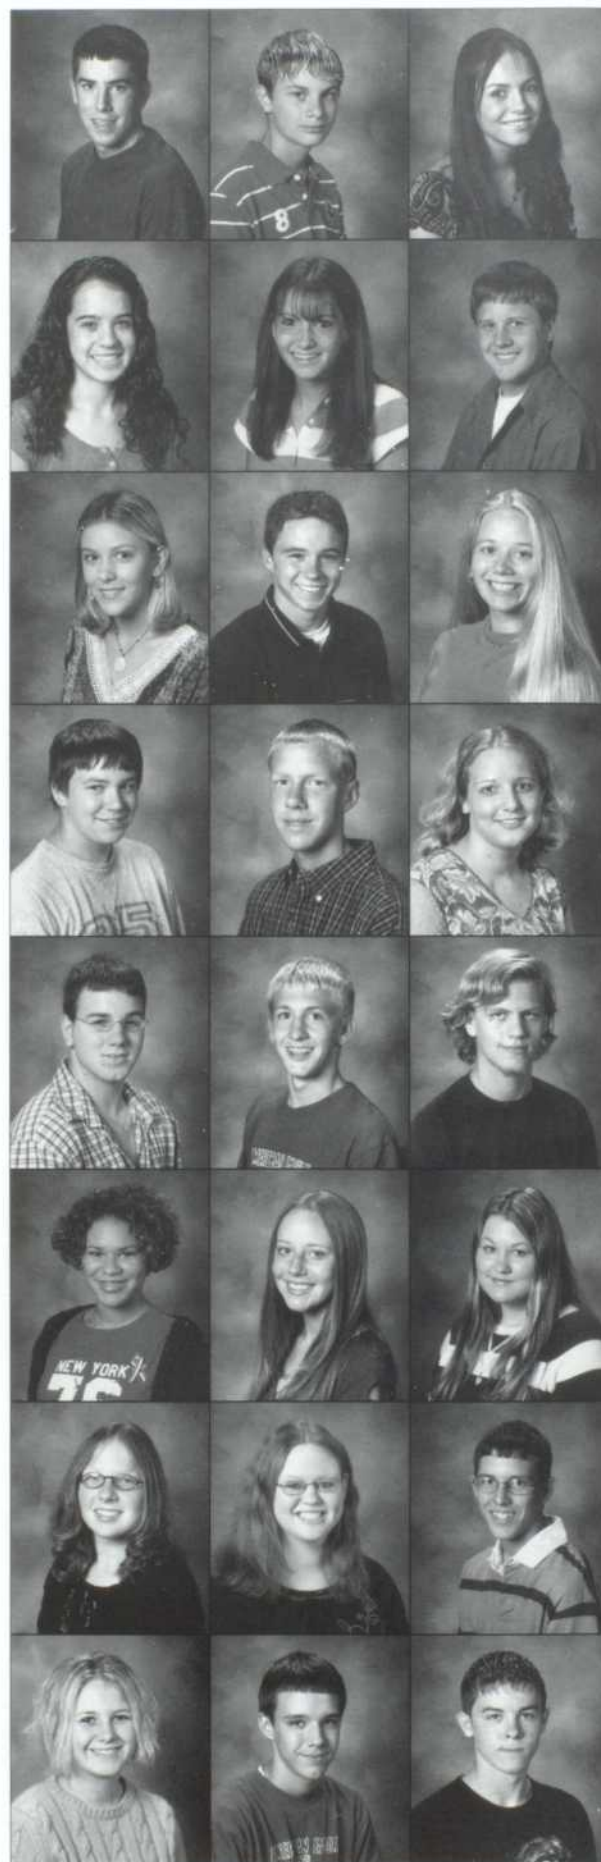

Lifelong friends Lauren Schwenk, Mindy Daunhauer, and Megan Rohleder get ready to attend the Welcome Freshmen Dance.

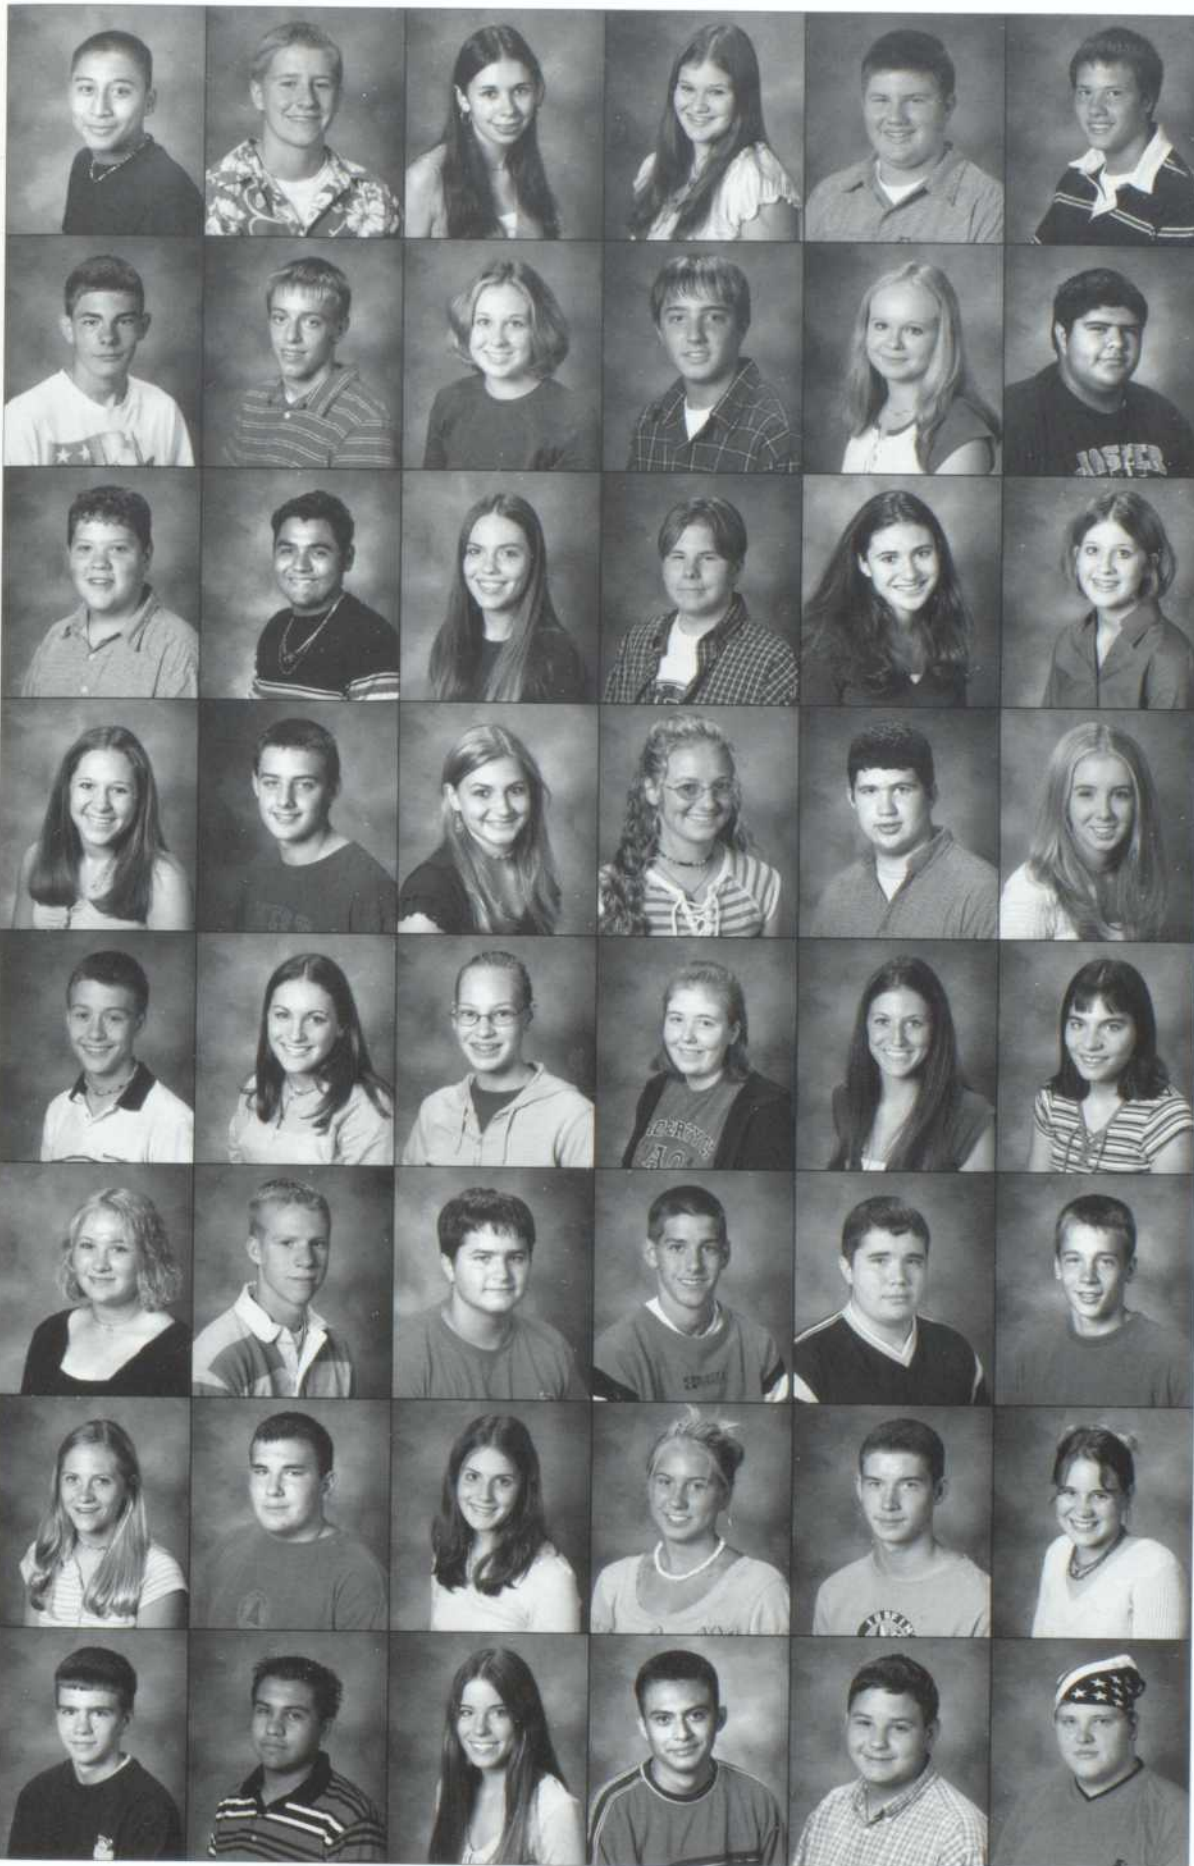

Stuffing his face with bananas, Krueger Pfister participates in the food eating contest at the Annual Pep Parade at the beginning of the school year.

Our tenth grade class has much to offer. We are one body formed by a multitude of personalities and talents. We have the hands, the ones who are not afraid to roll up their sleeves and do the dirty work. We have the head or brain, the "thinkers," the "bright crayons." We have our feet, our athletes, those who run the race for all of us. The feet carry the body, but the body cannot stand without its backbone. Where would we be without our president, Lindsey Taylor, who leads us each step of the way? The body will fall if it does not watch where it is going. The eyes are the many students who are found to be quiet and thought to be shy, but, when needed, are willing to share what they have learned by sitting back and watching. Our 2003 sophomore family is one body. We have been functioning together for 11 years. We are open to new family members; they are more individual parts that make up our one body.

Class of 2006

What was your favorite aspect of being a part of the Class of 2006?

“Our class has a lot of potential. People expect a lot from our class, and I enjoy the challenge. Our class works hard and can exceed those expectations.”

-Sam Linette
President

“I like being a part of the Class of 2006 because we are all unique. We have the potential to become a great class. We are good academically and athletically. We come together as one when we need to and we also go our separate ways. Being part of the Class of 2006 is a privilege.”

-Cassey Wagner
Vice President

“We are one of the biggest classes, and we are a very diverse group of people. Everyone has their own mind, and they don't let others change their mind about something they truly believe in.”

-Alisa Stewart
Secretary

“Just being in high school-We have so much more freedom and fun. Teachers are a lot cooler. At lunch we can have any food we want to eat. We also have study hall everyday. You meet so many more new friends, and the parties are awesome.”

Scratch

Taking a break from school, Abby Merkel (9) and Natalie Alles (9) enjoy a fun ride of Go-Karting in Riley Pitstick's (9) backyard.

Freshmen Brittany Kieffner, Kaitlin Lynch, Krystle Wuerth, and Gwen Moeller whisper the latest gossip in the girls' bathroom where no one can hear them.

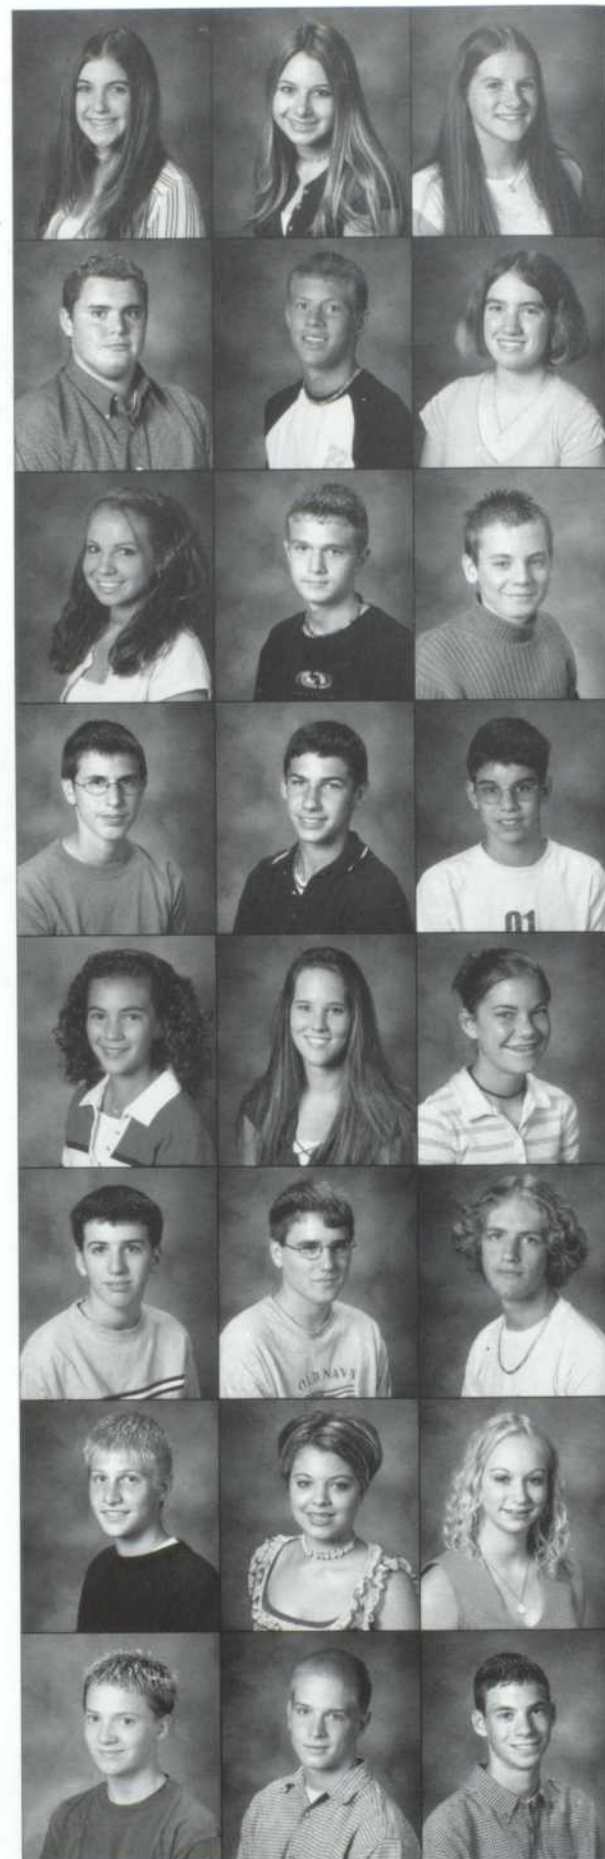

Go, Cats, Go! A group of freshmen gathers to support classmates against rival Southridge. The freshman boys' basketball team was playing at the Ireland gym.

At the beginning of this year, we started from scratch, having to prove we belonged here. We were given many responsibilities, and it seemed impossible to uphold the Jasper name.

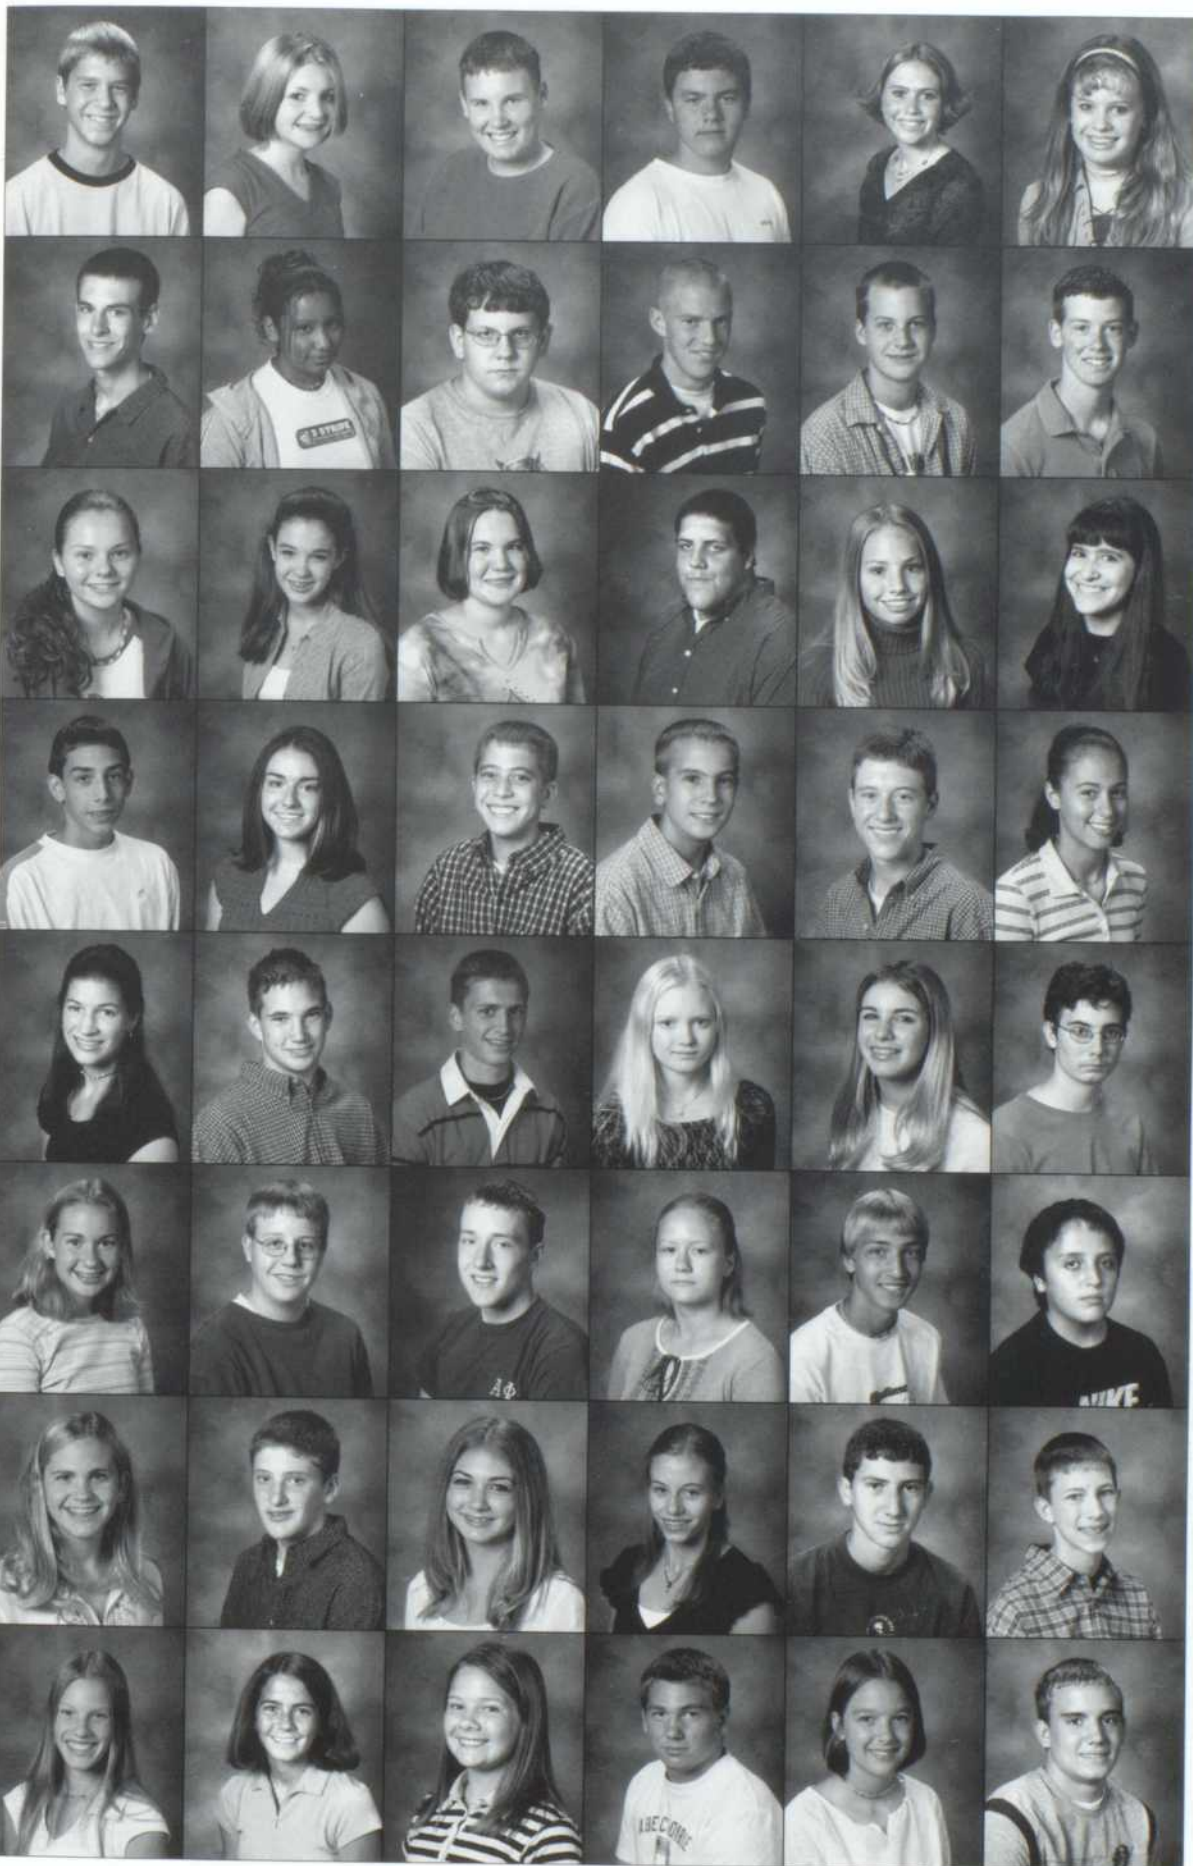

Coming from an old familiar school, it wasn't easy to adapt to the unfamiliar territory. The messy construction, mixed-up schedules, and crowded hallways didn't help us get settled in, either. Although there was plenty of chaos, we were sure not to get entangled in it, but to enjoy being freshmen.

As the year came to an end, some showed an individual spirit and discovered individual qualities. But throughout the year, we stuck together, and as one we were on the prowl.

Underclassmen

What we remember the best about the year 2003 is ...

“Foreign Language Week was the best this year! We got to act out skits, sing, and eat foreign food. What more fun could you ask for?” exclaimed Micki Seger (10). Sophomores Micki, Anna Krodel, and Amanda Meyer perform a song for their Spanish 2 class.

Freshmen Bart Sturm, Terry Henke, Heath Seng, Neil Dittmer, and Nick Grothouse hang out at a friend's house. Nick (9) commented, "I'll always remember going to Bart's party because of Dittmer's treadmill launching."

◀ Cheering on their classmates, sophomores gather at the end zone awaiting a touchdown. "I remember showing support for the Wildcats by dressing in school colors to show spirit," Hilary Seng (10) recalled.

▲ Out of the goodness of her heart, Mrs. Jochum allowed her hungry Junior class to make monkey muffins. "Even though we aren't a cooking class, we had the chance to make something. And my group realized we aren't very good at making monkey muffins," stated Amanda Nowakowski (11).

◀ A group of Junior girls supports their friend Erin Krodel (11) by attending the basketball homecoming. Jenny McComish (11) replied, "I'll always remember having a good time supporting my friend on homecoming night."

◀ "Mega Weekend was awesome! I remember fighting with whipped cream, flour, and water balloons while having a good time with my friends," said Abby Merkel (9). Some freshman girls took a weekend off and participated in the Young Life Mega Weekend to expand their faith.

Saying Goodbye

Gayle Jochum, Rich Abell, Ray Howard, and Connie Ross

Robert McCarty

Gayle Jochum

Gayle Jochum received both her BS and MS degrees from Purdue University. She taught Home Economics at Petersburg High School for one year before coming to Jasper to teach for 29 years. During the 1990's, the department name changed to Family and Consumer Sciences, and over the years, Mrs. Jochum taught all of the many disciplines offered in the FACS curriculum.

FACS offerings have given students "an opportunity to learn everyday living skills and to actually practice these," according to Mrs. Jochum. She says that she has enjoyed being with the students both in and out of the classroom, and she has tried to make a difference in the decisions they make as they grow and mature.

Her parting words to students are, "Become involved and take advantage of as many opportunities as you can. You will be working the rest of your life."

Mrs. Jochum adds that she never considered any other career besides teaching because of her family background with aunts, uncles, and a grandparent all in the profession. In addition, her husband has been at JHS for 29 years as a teacher and counselor, and her son and daughter-in-law both have teaching careers.

Mrs. Jochum plans to enjoy her family and to travel during retirement.

Rich Abell

Rich Abell graduated from Birdseye High School and then attended Oakland City College (now Oakland City University) for his B.S. and ISU for his M.S. degree in math and physics. He taught at Ireland High School for five years and followed that experience with 33 years at Jasper High School. His children, Greg, Gina, and Natalie, all graduated from JHS.

Many factors influenced him to become a teacher. He liked math and enjoyed solving problems and did not want to spend his life toiling in a factory or working on construction. Since Oakland City College, basically a teacher preparatory school, was relatively near his home, it was easy for him to commute.

What Mr. Abell likes best about teaching is interacting with students. He feels the JHS student body has always been outstanding, and "the majority of students are eager to do well and are willing to work at it." He adds, "I find a lot of satisfaction in helping them whenever I can."

Mr. Abell advises students, "Do in your life what you feel you will enjoy for your life. If you can't be happy in the work you are doing, then seek a different employment." He notes that he has never regretted coming to school in the morning, saying, "The people you work with have a great influence on how you feel about your work." He praises the "great staffs at both Ireland and Jasper" and adds "Staff includes everyone, not just the teaching staff."

While Mr. Abell has no definite plans after retiring, he says he'll take each day as it comes and go from there. The "Honey Do" list is pretty long, and he and his wife, Janet, are looking forward to traveling because there is much of the United States that they haven't seen.

Ray Howard

Ray Howard graduated from Ben Davis High School in Indianapolis and received his education degrees from the University of Indianapolis (then Indiana Central College) and Butler University. In addition to being in business in a private firm, Mr. Howard taught at various schools before coming to JHS for what became a 27-year career. He noted that it was "very enjoyable" here, where he found our students and staff "great people to work with." Mr. Howard's retirement plans include hunting, fishing, golfing, and traveling, as well as "piddling with odd jobs to help keep busy and stay healthy." A favorite quote for students is, "The only time you fail is when you don't try." He thanks former students who have sent letters and notes thanking him for "helping, listening, and just being there. Those are the things that make teaching enjoyable."

Connie Ross

Mrs. Connie Ross received her Bachelor of Science degree from Oakland City College. She was certified to teach business, physical education, and health. She began her career at Rochester High School; after two years there she transferred to Jasper High School, where she has taught for 30 years.

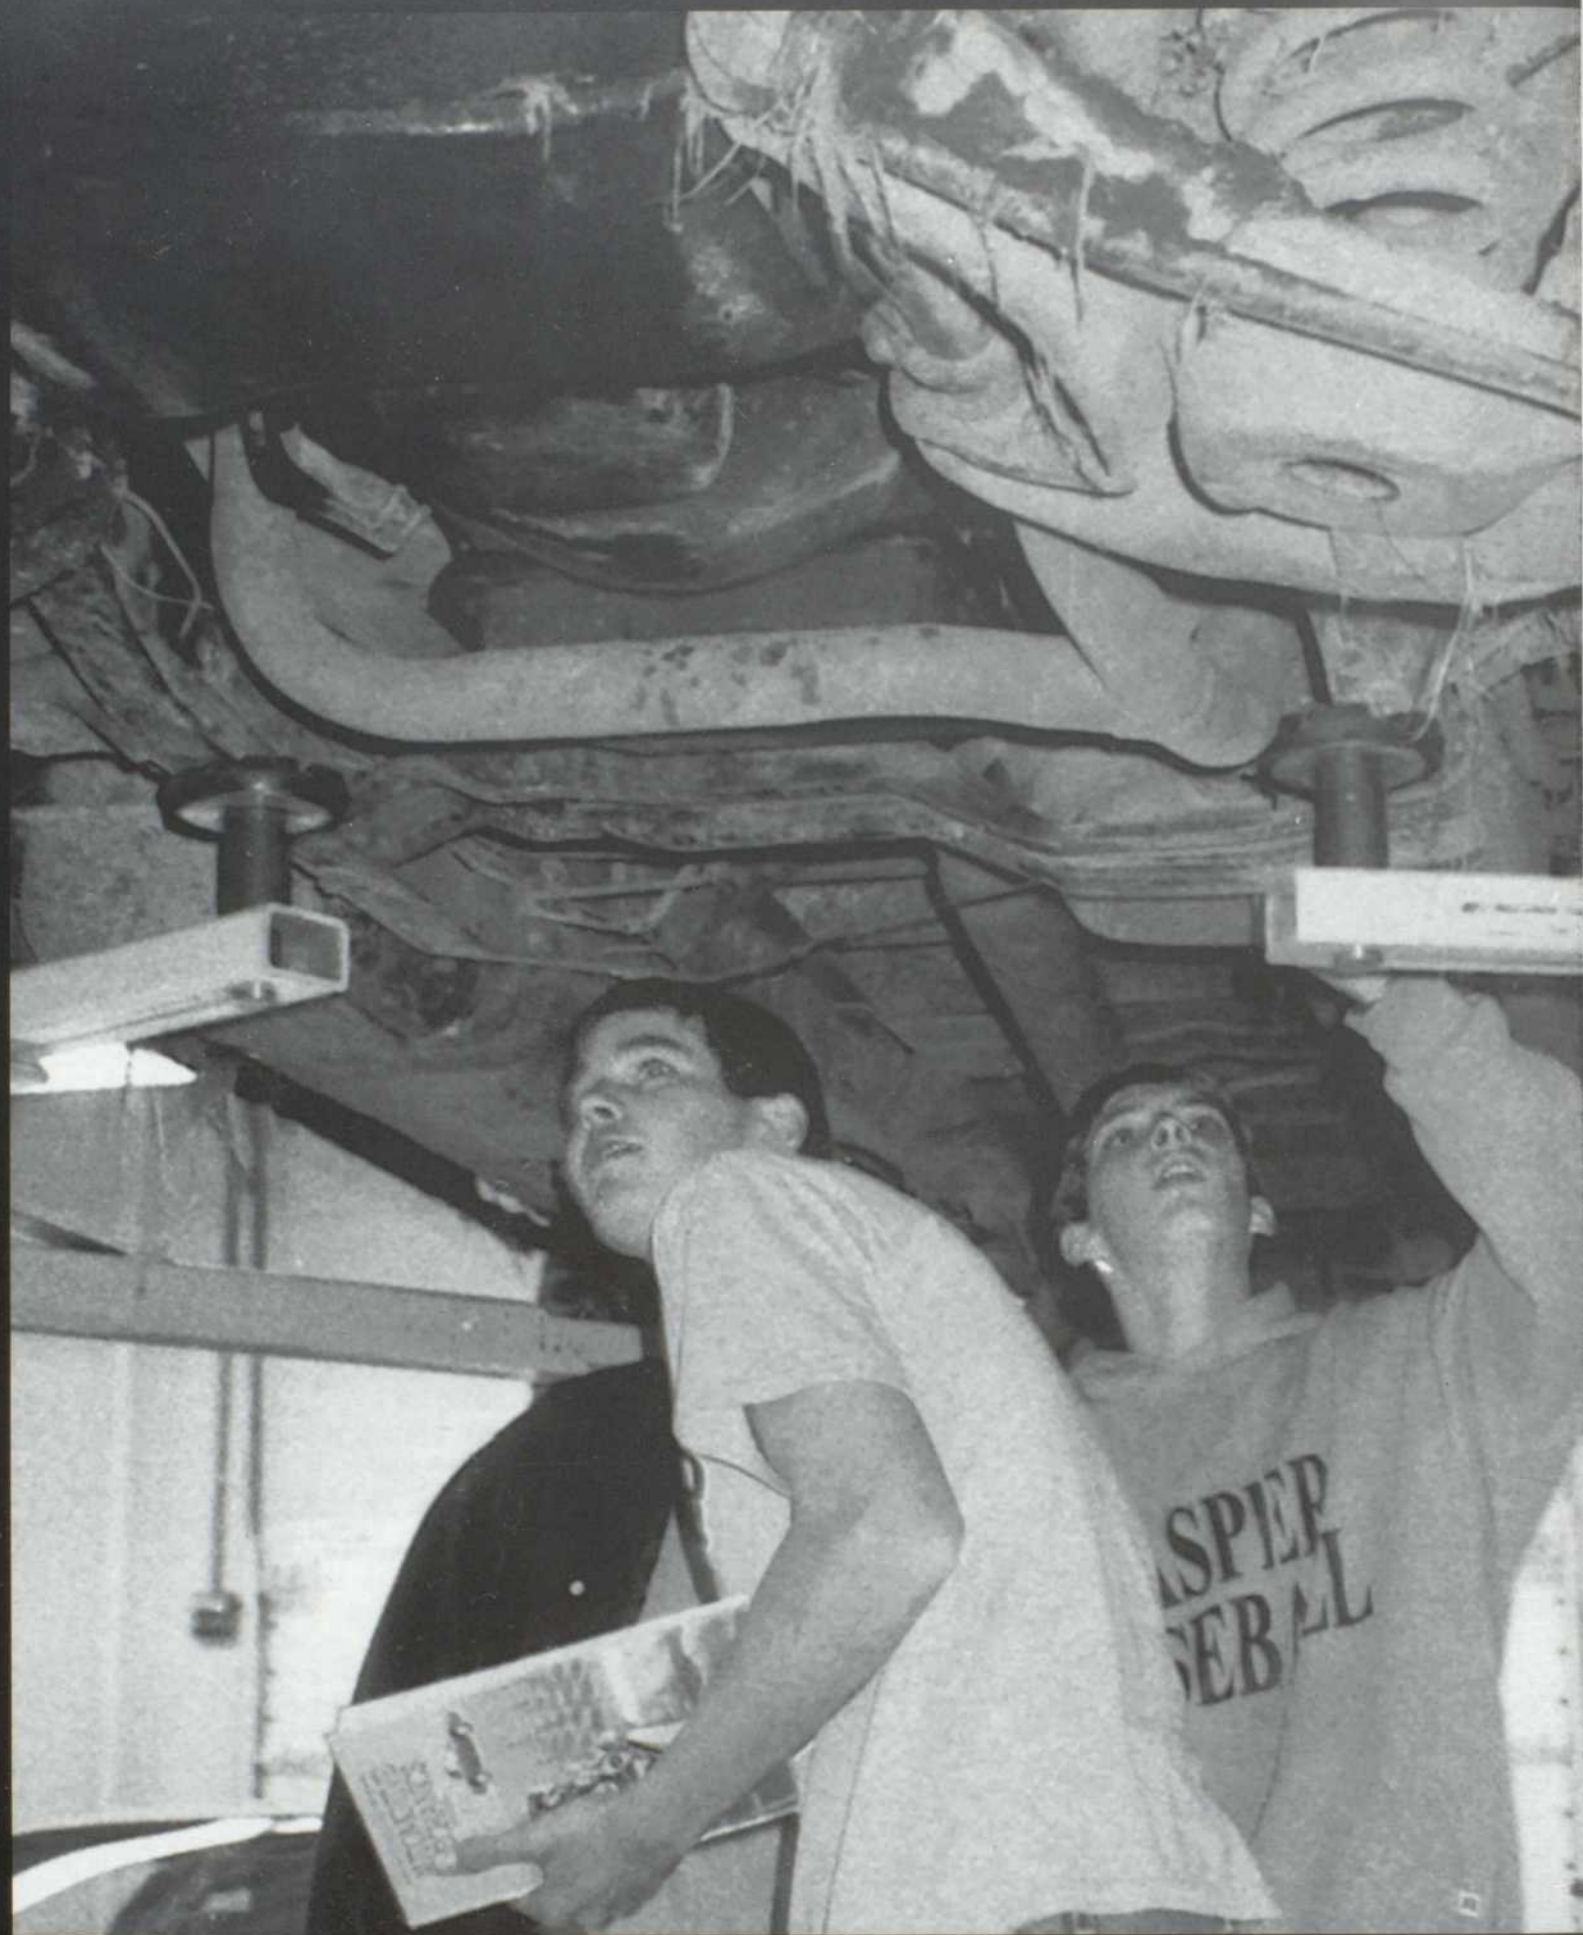

Mrs. Ross decided to become a teacher so as to help people, and she has always enjoyed working with teenagers. She has enjoyed the students and "the great faculty" she was involved with for thirty years.

Leaving advice for students, Mrs. Ross says, "Learn as much as you can while you are here because it helps so much later on in college. Take advantage of all the opportunities at JHS."

Mrs. Ross lives in Oakland City. After retirement, she plans to travel with her husband, Boyd, and children Sherry and Jeremy and their families. She has a cabin at Lake Barkley and enjoys gardening and antiques.

Mrs. Ross concludes that JHS "has been great - but I'm ready for something new!" She wishes everyone good luck.

School, courageous Jasper, Jasper Wildcats, we're all for you. J-J-JAS-P-P-PER

MANAGE the System

The administration was busy with moving from one part of the building to the other, as well as helping the students. Through the year Mr. Roberts and Mr. Scherry had their hands full with student conferences, meetings, and construction issues. Mr. Scherry, always smiling, patrolled the hallways.

In the office, Mrs. Kendall kept track of 1,054 students, their absences, early dismissals, and tardies. Mrs. Brandt, who has been working at JHS for 30 years, commented, "I enjoy working here. It's like a second home to me." Mrs. Egler answered the majority of phone calls coming into JHS and said that she loved to see the

The Athletic Department was helpful to students who needed information about sports schedules or wished to buy game tickets.

Choose your Future

The Guidance Office and Teen Wellness Office were places students found help. They might have been confused about college or had a tummy ache, but they sought aid from the guidance counselors or nurses.

Counselors Kathy Morrison and Stan Jochum helped students with questions about Core 40 classes, the Academic Honors curriculum, and basic graduation. The office door was always opening and closing; students entered seeking help and left with college brochures or applications, scholarship forms, and official transcripts. The counselors spoke with all underclassmen in early March and then visited classrooms later in the month to set students' schedule. Also in March eighth grade students toured the building and became accustomed to the high school world.

The Teen Wellness Office helped those who felt sick or needed somebody to talk to. Mrs. Hutton, Mrs. Ingle, and Ms. Kluemper did their best to comfort and help students who came into the office.

Research the References

The library has always been a great place to get away from the noisy, hectic hallways. Students and teachers retreated there to find information through books, the internet, or magazines to find out about almost anything. Some students sought for silence, so they could concentrate while they read. Others went to make copies, brainstorm ideas for upcoming projects, or prepare for tests.

Another resource for students was the bookstore. Selected individuals worked in the bookstore during study halls to sell common supplies such as pens, pencils, notebooks, and poster board which students forgot to bring to school. Mrs. Lechner and

Fix the Grammar

Whether it was compiling poetry projects, completing grammar worksheets, reading novels, writing journal entries, or giving speeches, students applied what they learned in English to their everyday lives.

Freshmen read "Romeo and Juliet" and the "Odyssey." For a poetry project, students learned about the poetry of selected writers, and they used their imaginations to write their own poems.

Participating in Roman Day, sophomores learned about the Romans' culture and also tasted typical foods the Romans ate. Job shadowing, speeches, and oral presentations were also experienced.

Juniors wrote research papers and enjoyed reading The Great Gatsby, Roots, Of Mice and Men, and other novels.

Seniors did much writing throughout the year, whether enrolled in English 12, World Literature, or English Literature and Composition. They also learned new vocabulary words, gave speeches, and read novels, plays, and other works.

Evaluate the Problem

Sometimes in high school, we thought we studied topics irrelevant for day-to-day lives. One subject often complained about was mathematics. But Brittany Sykes (9) begged to differ, stating, "My favorite part of Algebra I was when we learned how to do new things and apply them in real life situations."

"Mr. Jerger's 'Dictionary Magic'," Adrienne Englert (11) recalled, "and making fun of the textbook's story problems were my most memorable moments from Algebra II."

"Science is the center of everyone's life, regardless of what career we study. Science will have a great impact on our life, our health, and the decisions we make," Mrs. Theising stated. Various levels of Biology, Physics, and Chemistry as well as Earth Space were offered. With such a wide variety of classes, students could get hands-on experience in the world around them.

Completely renovated facilities provided a brighter outlook for students to learn more about science. With new equipment, students could get a better understanding of microscope usage. Dissections, bacterial growth labs, experimentations, and the study of prisms, rocks, and planets held student interest in all disciplines. Each class is equipped with emergency eye wash and a shower in case harmful chemicals are spilled. So whether it was through percent compositions or DNA models, science classes taught students life-long lessons.

In our short lifetimes we have experienced many history-making events, both nationally and locally. Kristin Weidenbenner (10) said that discussions about these events were the most memorable moments in her social studies class.

Thanks to modern technologies we could watch history documentation instantly. Networks like CNN and MSNBC covered newsbreaking events live. Some students were challenged by projects in which they took these modern technologies and put an old-world twist on them. For example, Mrs. Schnell's pupils created TIME magazines about the Renaissance.

Translate A Culture

Many students dream of growing up and getting out of Jasper. But, will they know how to speak the language when they get to where they are going? Spanish, German, Japanese, and French teachers helped students learn essential vocabulary and grammar in order to ask or answer questions.

To learn these skills students watched videos, performed skits, listened to CDs and authentic speakers, and played games, as well as did book and workbook homework.

Spanish classes made and brought in Mexican foods for the "Day of the Dead" and celebrated Foreign Language Week by performing skits and singing songs. French classes had a Mardi Gras party to celebrate the beginning of Lent. German classes read and wrote fairy tales as well as operas to help them better understand the German culture. Japanese classes read and wrote traditional Haiku poetry.

Business Law, taught by Mrs. Connie Ross, was offered to sophomores, juniors, and seniors. Students learned how to read contracts and understand marriage laws. The class also learned the U.S. government's system of law making.

Personal Finance was taught by Mr. Dan Musselwhite. The class explored managing money and learned how to do taxes. Students also learned how to figure interest on long term and short term loans.

Many other business classes were offered to students. Entrepreneurship taught the process of running one's own business. Students also developed a plan for a business and presented it to the class at the end of the semester. Planning, shaping, molding, sculpting, drawing, mixing, relaxing, forming, painting, creating...art. Music plays, teachers inspire, laughter rolls, and students create wonderful works of art. Think art is all black and white still life drawings? Think again.

The boundaries of precalculus identities and world history chapters dissolve when students enter an art room. A wide array of classes offered those with a variety of likes and dislikes the opportunity to experience the easy-going atmosphere of an art class. A whopping 30% of the JHS student population took advantage of the various art classes. Classes in which students enrolled included Introduction to Art, Ceramics/Sculpture, Printmaking/Visual Communications, Painting/Advanced Painting, Textiles/Crafts, Drawing/Advanced Drawing, Art History, and so much more! Choir members would be the epitome of talented students using Howard Gardner's theory of seven types of intelligence: linguistic, musical, logical-mathematical, spatial, bodily-kinesthetic, intrapersonal, and interpersonal.

Great memories were created at Country Fest and Spring, Pops and Rhythm

Concerts. Solo and Ensemble was hosted by Jasper High School this year. Because of daily practice in class for Solo and Ensemble, JHS sent nine solos, five firsts, and five ensembles to state competition.

Seniors will always remember the many times they sang the Latin song "Dies Irae" and "One Day More" from Les Miserables. "We love singing these songs because of their rhythm, the words, and the music," said Luke Keller (12).

Measure your Agility

As a requirement for graduation, students needed to pass two semesters of Physical Education classes and one semester of Health, usually during their freshman year. In addition, Lifesaving and Strength and Conditioning contributed to help teach students to stay fit and take care of their bodies.

Calisthenics consisted of jumping jacks, stretches, sit-ups, and push-ups to warm up the students before each P.E. period.

Strength and Conditioning was taken by guys interested in weightlifting and other vigorous activity. This class was offered at 7:00 A.M., and students could leave school after sixth period.

Lifesaving prepared students to react in emergency situations. The class focused on skills needed for water safety, and some students were also certified to give CPR and lifeguard.

Technology and Agriculture are offered to students to help them learn how to fix, make, or build common items used daily. Even though the classes were fun, the students were still expected to take tests and do homework.

Mr. Haycox's classes participated in Aquaponics. The students raised fish in two 300-gallon tanks, and they also grew veg-

Get Set for Life

Many teachers and aides were dedicated to helping students develop life skills along with spelling, reading, and math in the Special Needs department. Throughout the day peer tutors, students who gave up their study hall to help the students with disabilities, created a one-on-one learning environment. Peer tutors helped students with their bookwork and assisted them in speech drills.

The students who were able and skilled had jobs around town. From their work, they gained a learning experience, were able to take part in life in the real world, and became prepared for a successful life after high school. For those who stayed behind when the others went to work, field trips were common. The students went in small groups to local businesses such as Wal-Mart to obtain knowledge of everyday adult activities. With the help of teachers, peer tutors, and various activities, the Special Needs children will be able to live independently in the future.

Many students chose to further their education through the Vocational Program. Students spent two to four periods out of the building participating in hands-on classes at various host schools. Many of the classes, such as Welding I and II and Auto Mechanics, provided opportunities for college scholarships. Both were taught at Pike Central, as was Early Childhood Ed, where students received hands-on practice in a daycare facility.

Students interested in the medical field often enrolled in Health Careers and spent one semester in the classroom and one semester at a health care facility.

A new addition to the corporation, Law Enforcement, offered all budding police officers a chance to experience what the work is truly like.

Students enrolled in Building Trades had the opportunity to construct an entire house sold at the conclusion of the year. Each vocational class provided students with a wonderful opportunity to get a taste of the world beyond Algebra and English.

"Building a stronger foundation" became the motto of the Student Council. The statement proved to be suitable, ringing true in more ways than one. With the transformation of the building well underway as the school year began, the Council decided to mimic the constant construction by working non-stop to better JHS. They wanted to "build" a new, improved school spirit and attitude in the student body, forming a stronger foundation of school pride and appreciation. The Council, consisting of seventy-two students and two advisors, undertook many projects throughout the year to accomplish its goal. Members organized pep sessions (one per semester), collected money for Riley's Children's Hospital, created and sold the Cat Caller, and sponsored the annual Welcome Freshmen and Snowball Dances. New activities the Council conquered included "Service Day," a day advertised to the public for calling and requesting help with outdoor chores, and the "Couch Potato" at home basketball games. Many informative fliers and banners of encouragement hung in the hallways to show the Council's support of athletics and academics. "Through all the chaos of construction, we've managed to serve the student body consistently and enthusiastically," commented President Natalie Scherle.

As co-chairperson of the Publicity Committee, Hannah spent many hours painting banners, hanging fliers, and making informative intercom announcements.

"That's my number!" exclaimed Todd Kuper (9) as the winner of the first Coach Potato Contest was announced. Student Council members served the winners, freshmen Sam Linette, Todd Kuper, and Bart Sturm, all the candy, pizza, and soda they wanted.

Key Club members devoted lots of hours for the reward of feeling good about giving back to the community. Over 85 active members completed more than twelve activities.

Some highlights of first semester included highway clean-up, pumpkin decorating, and a toy drive as well as gift wrapping and ringing the bell for Salvation Army. Because the school budget could not afford more janitors, Key Club volunteered to wash chalkboards on Mondays and Thursdays. On some Saturday mornings, volunteers read stories to children at the Public Library. Head Start was a year-round activity that students were allowed to vacate their study halls to participate in. Members played various games with the children. A traditional summer activity was the Kiddie Karnival. With help from the Kiwanis, members worked rides and games for kids to enjoy.

Out of 115 clubs, Key Club placed first at the State Convention for monthly reports, second for Partners in Service, and second for scrapbook. Recognition for single service and major emphasis projects was also received. Seniors Chris Knies, Angie Giesler, and Jennifer Lueken were named Distinguished Officers.

Natalie Alles (9), Cassie Eckerle (9), and Jenna Mehringer (9) spend their Christmas break ringing the charity bell. The girls stood in front of Wal-Mart in the cold for an hour hoping shoppers would donate spare change.

Carefully using her artistic skills, Andrea Wilz (10) works tediously on the school lawn making pumpkins to distribute to local nursing homes. The pumpkin painting lasted from 12:00-3:00.

In order to broaden their horizons and dare to explore new cultures, students dedicated numerous hours to foreign language clubs. Some students had an opportunity to experience Germany first hand as they participated in the German Exchange travel program and visited Germany in June. They also had two chances for a German student to stay with them, once in October and again in April.

Students enrolled in Spanish had to sell at least five items to be a member of the Spanish Club. Their fundraiser helped raise money for club t-shirts and their two-day trip to Chicago for the Fiesta Latina (Latin Party) in April. Members also participated in bowling and soccer tournaments. Discovering the French culture, French Club members held their own party, Mardi Gras style, in February. Also, French Club was involved with snack sales from the food cart during study hall. During the summer, members of the Japanese Club had a rare opportunity to visit Japan.

Thus, students enjoyed the language and cultures of many countries. Fundraisers and club activities kept their clubs vital and active.

After a fun time of bowling, Jordie Schuetter (9), Ryan Hopf (9), Meredith Lilly (9), and Amanda Gerber (9), members of the Spanish Club, enjoy pizza and conversation.

The Publications class, with help from the Yearbook Club during the first semester, completed the yearbook and four issues of the newspaper. The club held meetings from time to time on Wednesday afternoons, and the class met every day. Each student was responsible for completing spreads, which included taking pictures, writing captions, and composing copy. The Comet was a new challenge taken on by the Publications class, an English Department elective. With the Comet came responsibilities like writing articles to bring school news and entertainment to the readers.

The Gifted and Talented program was offered for students who showed advanced artistic skills such as drawing, painting, sketching, or shading and who were interested in art-related careers. In order to join GT, each student had to put together a portfolio of artwork that was judged by a committee selected by the art teachers. The chosen students participated in various activities and programs put on by professional artists. The students met with several artists including Nick Ring, a sculpturalist; Bill Whorall, a photographic journalist; Myra Schuetter, a watercolor painter; and Robert Bluestone, a guitarist.

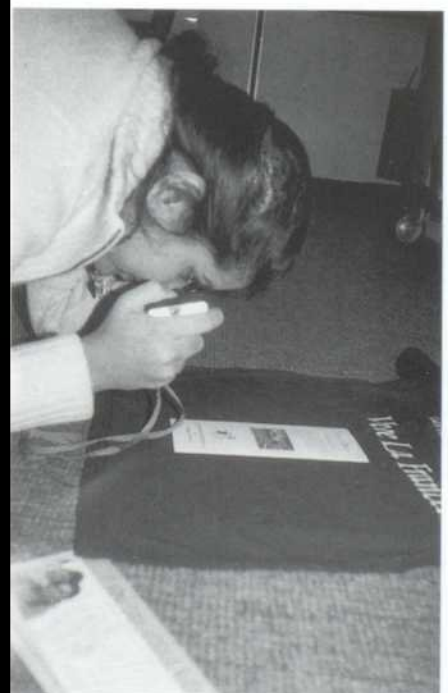

Gifted and Talented members Heather Hirsch (12) and Javier Guizar (10) examine the variety of artworks created by Myra Schuetter. Schuetter, a graduate of Jasper High School, is a painter who specializes in watercolor.

Some members of Color Guard line up on the 40-yard line to position themselves for the band's next transition at one of the dress rehearsals.

At the beginning of the band performance, Color Guard started out as the focus of the program. The girls formed a ring at the intersection of four band lines.

Color and Winter Guard is one of those activities that is an enigma if you haven't participated in it. None of the Color and Winter Guard members seem to have the right words to explain what they do, either.

Members spent endless hours perfecting tosses and dance routines. Summer and weekend practices sometimes lasted ten or more hours. With all that time spent together, the girls learned unity, performance, and perfection.

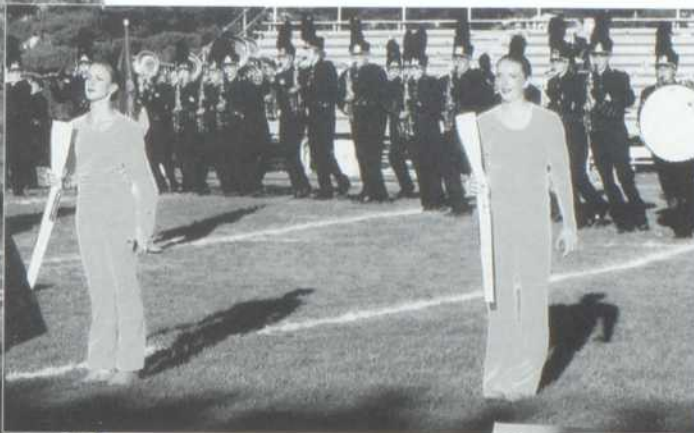

The girls used their skills to place second in District for performance. They also placed third in Marching Band State Finals. In March, Winter Guard was told they would not be advancing to State. Surprisingly, though, the girls received a phone call a week later informing them they would be going to Center Grove, where they placed sixth.

Those involved started in May and did not finish until March. The girls spent much time together experiencing more than how to toss flags or throw rifles. They built friendships.

Victoria Merkley (12) and Courtney Hopster (11) were two members of the Weapons Line. They also both participated in Winter Guard.

Being inducted into the National Honor Society is a reward bestowed upon many well-rounded students. Members are chosen on the principles of character, leadership, scholarship, and service. To be considered for NHS, a junior or senior student must earn a 3.0 grade point average. Once inducted into the NHS, members are required to complete hours of service to both the school and the community. Since the NHS is not group-oriented, members are relied upon to complete service hours individually. However, the society as a whole has raised money for the Hadi Shriners, collected canned food for the Dubois County Food Bank, and supported the Dubois County Mental Health Association with its bake sale.

The Octagon Club held its annual blood drive on November 15th. This year's participants donated a total of 68 pints of blood. Donors were provided with snacks and drinks after a successful blood donation in appreciation of their generosity. Earlier in the year, the Octagon Club entered a team into the March of Dimes walk which was held at the Riverwalk.

Every year the National Honor Society takes charge of the Data Match fundraiser, which uses surveys to match the compatibility of students to each other. Anina Tollett (12) explains the process of filling out the form to Neil Hopf (9) during homeroom.

T-shirts were so often the staple of teenagers' wardrobes that messages often made the wearer look like a walking billboard. If the T-shirt had words, people read them. Some students put their belief on the back of their blue tie-dyed shirts. The statement "Drugs are just bad... mmkay?" adorned the shirts of the All-Stars when they went to third grade classrooms at Ireland, Precious Blood, Tenth Street, and Holy Family to instill their beliefs in the children.

SADD's shirts were black and simply stated "Students Against Destructive Decisions." The SADD group decided to battle substance abuse with their peers. Members signed a contract at the beginning of the school year with their parents. It stated that they would never drive if they were under the influence of any substance that would impair their thinking. One of SADD's events was the Grim Reaper. He "killed" students to represent the people who die in America each day because of drunk driving accidents. The group also hosted a tailgate party before a home football game. This event promoted drug-free fun.

Junior Achievement was an organization which held meetings on Monday nights from 5:30 to 7:30. Students were separated into two companies, Genkin and Jawoa. Each company had to produce and sell its own products. They also had to do the paper work and deal with money like a real business. Some products made this year were Snack Kits, First Aid Kits, Potpourri Pots, and Cookie Jars. The group held its banquet on April 28th to hand out awards, scholarships, and prizes.

Junior Civitan was active with members raising $6,500 at the annual Radio-a-thon for the summer Camp C.A.R.E. program. The Radio-a-thon was a three-hour event with live entertainment. Other activities were collecting cans for the Dubois County Food Bank and recycling paper with cartons placed throughout the school. Also, some members helped with the Winter Special Olympics in Paoli. In April they raised money for the troops in Iraq by collecting money at Bretzville Junction.

Both clubs involved a number of students who gained valuable experiences from their memberships.

Butterflies in the stomach aren't the only way in which butterflies relate to performance. The caterpillar stage can be compared to the auditioning. Performing Arts Club members had to audition for their three productions: Rowan and Martin's Laugh-In, All I Really Need to Know I Learned in Kindergarten, and School House Rock Live!

The larva stage is like the many practices it takes to put on a memorable performance. Members of Destination Imagination had to spend countless hours, giving up Saturdays and Sundays, to put together eight-minute skits and prepare for their "Instant Challenge." Three teams competed in problems "Once Improv a Time," "Theater Smarts," and "ViDIo Adventure."

All of this ended up producing beautiful butterflies- the performance. The flight, crazy and unorganized, is what it seemed like backstage. Nerves flew during the final seconds before a new act began at PAC's Jazz and Country Festivals. Even though the performances were only short lived, the memories of them will last forever.

Students involved in the Bible Club wanted to become closer with God. The students met every Thursday morning at 7:30 in room 508. Members enjoyed talking, praying, and getting to know each other and God. They studied Bible verses and discussed what they meant. They also organized "See You at the Pole," a prayer service around the flag pole in the fall.

Eight members were included with the Spell Bowl. On October 21, 2002, the students competed at the Hoosier Spell Bowl at South Spencer High School in Rockport. Each member had to spell words from a list that they studied daily in the library at 7:30 am. Together the team spelled 48 of 60 words correctly, placing them second.

The Academic Team, coached by Mrs. Julie Schnell, consisted of several students who were sophisticated in many academic studies. On March 12, 2003, the team participated in the District Academic Bowl. "I am proud of the work these students have done to prepare for our competitions," Mrs. Schnell said. ## JV Football Team Goes Undefeated

At the beginning of the season, Jasper JV and freshman football coaches had one objective, to form the young Wildcat players into varsity material. As this goal was met, many long hours were spent in tough practice. This time gave way to successful seasons for the JV and freshman football teams.

The JV team ended the season undefeated with a 4-0 record. One of these wins was against major rival Heritage Hills. Coach Hubster felt the Wildcats should be recognized not only for an undefeated season, but also for the hard work the players put in to accomplish this.

Revenge Sought by Eagles; Denied by Cats

victors: final score 27-21. Another high-adrenaline game came at tourney time, facing Zionsville at regional. During the previous season, the Cats had denied Zionsville, so they were out for revenge. The Cats clawed their way into the game on to victory. The season ended at semi-state in a heart-breaking 6-10 loss to Roncalli, disheartening the Cats at the realization that semi-state had been the last game for Head Coach Jerry Brewer, a JHS legend. He ended his 44 years of coaching with the most wins in Indiana, 21 Big 8 Conference titles, 10 sectional/regional crowns, and a State championship. One of only 12 coaches in the nation nominated for the inaugural Power of Influence Award, he was only the second coach to be elected to the IN FCA Hall of Fame while still active. JHS is extremely proud of the legacy left by Brewer as well as the legacy that our football team has earned for itself.

Teamwork Proves Successful During the Cats' Season

The JV and Freshman Lady CATS had exciting, winning seasons. Their success was credited to playing together as a team. Hours of dedicated practice were also a must. The teams worked everyday after school from 3:20 to 5:30 to perfect skills.

"Just being part of the JHS volleyball team" is what Adrienne Nicholson wants to always remember.

"It was a good feeling that all of our hard work hadn't been for nothing," commented Meredith Lilly about the freshman team's accomplishments.

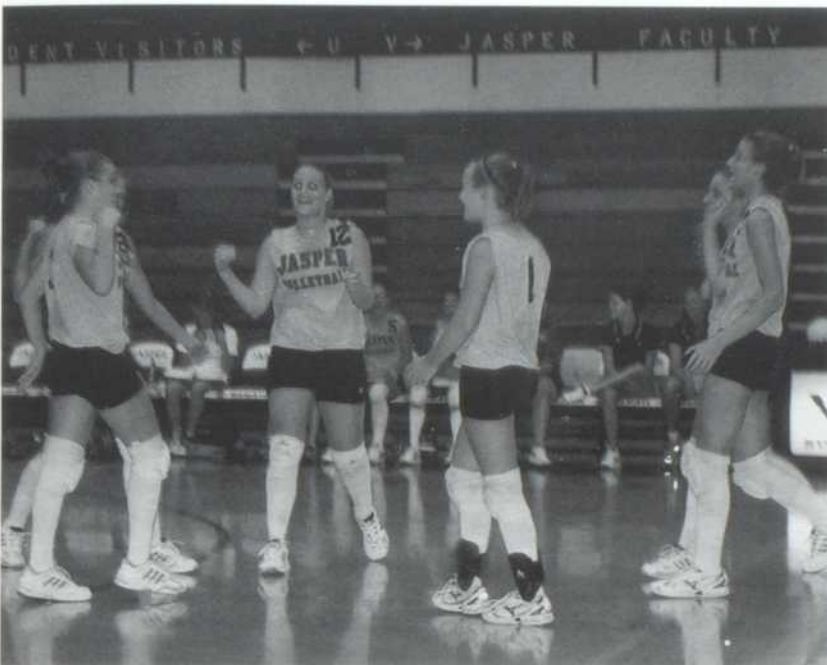

Coach Joni Buell stated, "The highlight of our season was the ability of these girls to overcome mental obstacles. This was a group with a lot of spirit. I feel that the whole team

"Just like that, it was over." Chris Schmidt (12), later named "Most Valuable Defender," summed up his feelings on the unexpected end of his final season after a last-second shot by a Sullivan

Sullivan Steals Season in a Heart Beat

highlight of the season, said Coach LaGrange, was "a five-game winning streak in February that included a victory vs. New Albany and a come-from-behind thriller at Mt. Vernon in overtime." Another senior never to be forgotten was Luke Keller, motivating the team even when he wasn't in the game. Keller was the inspiration of the "Keller Krew," a homemade t-shirt clad ensemble of senior boys who attended most games to hold signs and show support. Keller deservedly was presented the "Mental Attitude Award." Blake Evans (12) took home the "Passion Award" and led the team in free throws, assists, and steals. Even though the tourney didn't end as they had hoped, the Cats captured several original goals. They improved and learned every week and every game, becoming a united front over the course of the season.

JV Team Takes Conference Title

Mounting tensions grew on the hardwood floor during the last game of the Junior Varsity season. The Lady Wildcats played out the dwindling final minutes. The game, on Washington's home court, proved victorious for the Cats and allowed them to claim the title of Big 8 Conference Champions. Coach Ryan Erny described this game as a memorable moment of the season. He went on to commend the JV team by saying, "The girls were more concerned with winning than with who scored the most points. They were an unselfish team."

The Freshman basketball season stretched from October to February. According to Coach Kevin Schipp, in these five months the

Wildcats Go All the Way

And there they sat in a dugout at Victory Field, clad in pinstripes with a look of disbelief on their solemn faces. Within innings of a fifth State title, the Wildcats watched their season end in the hands of New

JHS captured its 27th sectional crown with a 5-2 win over Pike Central. In regional action, Memorial gave the team a test of heart, as the Cats narrowly squeaked out a 2-1 win in 10 innings. With thoughts of returning to State, the Cats faced West Vigo in the regional

Denu Vaults into the Record Books

The boys' track team tried something a little different in its opening meet against Vincennes. The throwers participated in running relays, coined

"Fat Man Races," due to the fact that most of the throwers were muscular weight lifters instead of agile sprinters. The boys got off to a slow start, beating

Washington, but dropping to Vincennes, Princeton, Forest Park, Heritage Hills, and Gibson Southern. They realized it's "not whether you win or lose," it's how you play the game.

After a season of learning, the Cats were able to find their winning niche in time to finish third in Conference and fourth in sectional.

Using his strength, thrower Ross Flannagan (11) slings the discus an astonishing distance. Many of the throwers also participated in the relay events which were coined "Fat Man Races."

Cameron Denu (12) gracefully flies over the thirteen-foot high pole vault bar. Cameron broke the school record with a height of 13'9" early in the season.

points this season. The most field event points award was bestowed upon sophomore Megan Schwartz, who over-jumped her own height of 5'2". Jenny McComish kept the spirits of the Wildcats soaring and was honored with the Cathy Guthery Mental Attitude award. Assistant coach Hubster also had two discus throwers, Trisha Arensman and Melissa Hopf, to brag on as they advanced to Regional. It was the first year for Coach Hubster to have throwers advance. A handful of talented runners also had the honor of competing at

Cats Go For Record-Breaking Season

Being unranked at the beginning of the season and feeling the pressure of last year's qualification to State finals, the Cats had weight mounting on their shoulders, especially since they had four returning seniors. In fact, on the boys' first visit to The Legends, where they would play at State, they placed a disappointing eleventh. After that the Cats kicked it in. They started setting records, and players stepped up. In fact, Coach Joe Hagan commented about one of the players. "Kevin Flannagan had a big impact on the team this year. I felt he would round out the team as the number five player, but he pushed number three all year." The boys also received encouragement from captain Tom Heltzel (12) and last

Basketball Fever

Final touches are placed on the gym as basketball flooring is prepared. The auxiliary gym is the new home for a swimming pool, gym, athletic offices, weight room, locker rooms, hall of fame, and training room.

What Is All That Junk?

Buckets after buckets of adhesive find themselves in this hallway as construction workers prepare to lay the tile flooring in the main locker hallway. Hallways were often crowded with piles of tools and material, making navigating the halls always interesting.

Out With the Old

The end of a swimming era was completed when the old swimming pool was filled in with concrete. The old pool area will house a new study hall and practice facilities.

Movin' On Up

At the beginning of the year, the swimming pool was just a skeleton, but as the year progressed the facility became even more impressive. The new Olympic sized pool will house Indiana's largest pool south of Bloomington.

Acting in Style

At the close of the school year, the auditorium was closed and remodeled with new chairs, lighting, and sound systems.

Building the Foundation

The entire room 302 is gutted and renovated as permanent walls are being built. Misplaced classrooms were the result of all areas of the building being renovated.

Construction Zone

As the year came to a close, so did the construction project that we had become all too familiar with. We were greeted at the beginning of the year with new classrooms, lockers, and hallways. Throughout the year we were diverted, rearranged, and misplaced as renovation to all parts of the building took place. We witnessed the swimming pool turn into concrete, the library into dust, and the entire office and front entrance area into rubble. We all were amazed when viewing the impressive band room and the new auxiliary gym for the first time. Was this really the school we had attended the previous year? We had gone from the retro 70's to state-of-the-art facilities. The new athletic facility in the rear of the school was broken in as tennis, soccer, softball, and baseball all had the opportunity to open their season with new fields and courts. Despite all the dust, noise, and just plain nuisance, none of us will really miss the orange carpet.

The 2002 - 2003 school year was in many ways exactly like the dozens that preceded it. We had our dances, sporting events, the typical homecomings and homework, and so on. But our job as "J" Staff members was to capture the feeling and atmosphere of the moment so this year would not become just another year. We toiled long and hard because we wanted you to be able to recall specific events and feelings. If in the future the content between these covers will hold a link to the past, these pages will tell stories of your adolescent hopes and your dreams. Did you achieve them? Our captions and copy will speak of triumphs and defeats, lessons learned, and lessons taught. We hope these pages will help you recall old stories of friendships and crazy adventures. After all of the hours of picture-taking, computer editing, and copy writing, we hope you will enjoy On the Prowl as much as we have enjoyed producing it.
